

Is 17P

Right For Me?

17P is a weekly medicine that is safe for your baby and could help you stay pregnant longer.

Here are some important things to consider about 17P

Why should I consider 17P?

If you have had a baby born more than 3 weeks before your due date, you are at risk of having another baby born too soon.

What can 17P do for me and my baby?

17P could help you stay pregnant longer. Staying pregnant for at least 39 weeks gives a baby more time to grow and develop fully.

Is 17P safe for my baby?

17P is FDA approved, is safe for your baby, and can help give them critical time to develop.

Will 17P guarantee that I won't have a baby born too early?

There is no guarantee that 17P will 100% prevent a baby being born too soon, but it has been shown to help women stay pregnant longer.

Does 17P hurt me?

It is a shot, so those are never fun. The most common side effect for women is pain at the injection site.

When do I start 17P?

17P injections begin as close as possible to your 16th week of pregnancy.

How will I fit 17P in my week?

Visiting your healthcare provider for 17P can mean time away from your other responsibilities, such as work.

How often do I get 17P?

Once a week through your 36th week of pregnancy. 17P will usually require weekly visits to your healthcare provider.

How will I get to my healthcare provider?

It is important to consider how you will get to a weekly visit for a 17P injection.

Who can help support me?

Committing to weekly 17P injections means that you might want to share info about 17P with your friends and family so they can support you.

Talk to your healthcare provider about 17P to see if it is right for you and answer any questions you may have.
